Historical or Biographical Note

Dr. Elaine B. Feldman (1926- ) is a physician, scientist and educator. She has held professional positions at Mount Sinai Hospital in New York City (1951-1954), the State University of New York, Downstate Medical Center (1957-1972), and the Medical College of Georgia (1972-1992). She has earned an outstanding reputation for research in lipid absorption and metabolism, as well as for nutrition education, especially for clinicians. Her outstanding career as a physician researcher and physician educator came at a time when very few women were active in these fields, and in this regard she served as a pioneer and example for the women who followed her.
