ALFRED WILLIAM DOUGLASS DIARY
1841

Biography

Alfred William Douglass was an educator in Nashville, Tennessee. He graduated from the University of Nashville in 1842 and worked as a tutor for the institution for several years after his graduation. In January 1849, Douglass and James L. Meigs opened a private school, teaching English, Classical Studies, and Mathematics.

He died of cholera on August 23, 1849.

Scope and Contents

This collection contains one handwritten, penciled, notebook which represents class notes taken by Alfred William Douglass while a student at University of Nashville, dated November 20, 1841.

The notebook contains 118 numbered pages of history, theology, and poetry notes.